

Congressmen Discuss How Far U.S. Patrol Will Extend And How It Will Aid Britain

Churchill's Broadcast Starts Speculation on Exact Status of U. S. 'Defense' Line
Norris Has View
Senator Says Convoys in Atlantic Might Encourage Tokyo

Washington, April 28 (AP)—Winston Churchill's high appraisal of the role of the United States navy's extended offshore patrol in the "battle of the Atlantic" aroused keen interest today on Capitol Hill.

Ever since President Roosevelt disclosed Friday that naval vessels were operating great distances at sea in the interests of hemisphere defense, many legislators have been frankly uncertain just what significance the widened patrol zone might play in the program of aid to Britain.

Mr. Roosevelt carefully avoided connecting the extension of the patrol with anything except defense considerations, but the words of Prime Minister Churchill yesterday were interpreted in a number of quarters as proof that the step was calculated—at least incidentally—to furnish the greatest help possible to the royal navy in maintaining Britain's North Atlantic life line.

The forcefulness of some of Churchill's phraseology attracted special notice. The prime minister spoke of the patrol extension as representing "tremendous decisions" which brought him "in-describable relief." He also said that the United States was extending Britain "naval support" within the limits of the patrol plan, and voiced the belief that this country did not intend to be "frustrated" in its policy by permitting lease-lend supplies to be sunk by Nazi action.

Would Transfer Ships
Meanwhile, Senators Norris (Ind.-Neb.) and Russell (D.-Ga.) came out in favor of transferring more U. S. naval vessels to Britain before instituting convoys.

Norris, who fought unsuccessfully to have a prohibition against convoys written into the British aid bill, told reporters he favored giving British battleships, cruisers or other fleet units needed to protect her Atlantic shipping.

If the United States itself should undertake convoy duty, he said, it might tie up most of the fleet in the Atlantic and thus lead Japan to try further expansion in the Pacific.

While saying he was anxious to see American supplies reach Britain, Russell informed reporters he did not yet favor convoys and would prefer the transfer of American warships to the British.

Senator Glass (D.-Va.), strong supporter of administration foreign policy, told reporters he wanted "to deliver the goods Great Britain needs" and added:

"I am in favor of conveying the goods we sell or give and if necessary, carrying them in our own merchant ships. It is time to start conveying now—we should have been doing it long ago."

An informal poll of the Senate, said to have been taken by leaders as a result of White House inquiries, indicated that at least 45 of the 95 members would oppose any legislation specifically authorizing conveying.

Approximately an equal number, it was said, would vote for the resolution by Senator Tobey (R.-N. H.) to prohibit convoys if the proposal ever reached the floor for a vote.

By Car at Noon Today
Ward Ingalsbe, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Warren Ingalsbe of 311 Washington avenue and a pupil at School No. 7, was knocked down but not seriously injured this noon when struck by an auto driven by Simon Wood of 259 Clinton avenue, a retired member of the Kingston police department.

The boy was rushed to the Kingston Hospital where it was said that he was not seriously hurt, but would remain overnight in the hospital for observation.

According to the police report the boy ran out from behind a parked car in front of the Wood car, which was traveling south over Washington avenue.

Great Britain Focuses Attention Upon U. S. War Goods Shipments

Failure in Greece Produces Less Bad Feeling Than Fall of France Last Year; Churchill Reviews War in Light of American Aid

London, April 28 (AP)—Writing a tragic "finis" to the battle of Greece, the British press played up today Prime Minister Churchill's emphasis on United States aid in the battle of the Atlantic, but cautioned against expecting too much comfort from America after the important Balkan setback.

Official quarters declined to amplify the announcement of Australian Army Minister Percy C. Spender in Sydney that Australian troops already had started leaving Greece and there was a tendency here to speak of other things.

The allied failure in Greece produced less discouragement than the collapse of France last summer, and public attention focussed on the task of keeping supplies coming across the Atlantic.

The Manchester Guardian predicted that "in the future we shall see something like a division of labor between the American and British fleets, but a division of labor that does not break any political pledge."

The Daily Herald called for "the mood of the weeks after Dunkerque—a mood in which, by a united feat of organization, sacrifice and energy, historic miracles were performed."

This newspaper warned against writers and speakers who "still stick to their rose-colored spectacles . . . beaming in the direction of the United States."

The Daily Mail, commented: "Throughout this war whenever we have suffered a serious reverse there has been a tendency to turn to the United States for comfort. It is a tendency that can retard our own effort . . . the United States is giving us invaluable help. That help can not for some time to come be decisive."

Plans Shaping for Greater Output of 'Arsenal' Than Any One Could Match

Washington, April 28 (AP)—Against the possibility that war may still be raging two years hence, defense officials are shaping plans for expanding output of the "arsenal of democracy" beyond the capacity of any possible foe.

Persons in close touch with the planners reported today that vast new bomber, ammunition and other arms plants were in the preliminary design stage and predicted requests to Congress for billions to build and operate them.

The program is based on estimates of the 1943 needs of United States armed forces and those of countries which this nation may then be supplying with munitions. The plans must be made well in (Continued on Page Five)

Lindbergh Resigns His Colonelcy

Sends Letter to F. D. R. in Reply to Press Conference Remarks on 'Copperheads'

Expresses Regret
Lindbergh Says He Will Serve His Country as Private Citizen

New York, April 28 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, in a letter to President Roosevelt, today resigned as a reserve officer in the United States army air corps.

The Text of Colonel Lindbergh's letter follows:

My Dear Mr. President:

Your remarks at White House press conference on April 25 involving my reserve commission in the United States army air corps have of course disturbed me greatly. I had hoped that I might exercise my right as an American citizen, to place my viewpoint before the people of my country in time of peace without giving up the privilege of serving my country as an air corps officer in the event of war.

But since you, in your capacity as President of the United States and commander in chief of the army, have clearly implied that I am no longer of use to this country as a reserve officer and in view of other implications that you, my President and my superior officer, have made concerning my loyalty to my country, my character, and my motives, I can see no honorable alternative to tendering my resignation as colonel in the United States army air corps reserve. I am, therefore, forwarding my resignation to the Secretary of War.

I take this action with the utmost regret, for my relationship with the air corps is one of the things that has meant most to me in life. I place it second only to my right as a citizen to speak freely to my fellow countrymen, and to discuss with them the issues of war and peace which confront our nation in this crisis.

I will continue to serve my country to the best of my ability as a private citizen.

Respectfully,

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH

The letter was dated April 25, 1941.

Called It Dumb

President Roosevelt, at his press conference last Friday, asserted that it was dumb to consider a Nazi victory inevitable and classed Col. Lindbergh with appeasers who urged peace during the Revolutionary and Civil Wars on the grounds that those wars could not be won.

Col. Lindbergh's name was brought into the discussion when a reporter asked why the flier had not been called into active service, although he held a commission in the air corps reserve. Replying, Mr. Roosevelt said that during the Civil War numerous foreigners, liberty-loving people, fought on both sides, and that at the same time both sides led certain people to go, that is, did not call them into service.

He said the people who were thus ignored were the Vallandighams. He explained that the Vallandighams were people who, from 1863 on, urged immediate peace, arguing that the north could not win the war between the states.

(Clement L. Vallandigham was a member of the House from Ohio. In 1863 he was arrested for alleged "treasonable utterances" and banished to the Confederate states. He was known as a leader of the "Copperheads.")

Germans Plant Swastika Over Acropolis in Athens; 2 Columns Pursue Retreating British

Corfu Is Taken

Italians Report Troops Occupy Island Off Grecian Coast

(By The Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's swastika flag of conquest flew today over the ancient Acropolis in Athens, birthplace of the world's first democracy, while two German columns drove south across the Peloponnese in pursuit of retreating B. E. F. troops.

Australian Army Minister Percy C. Spender said the withdrawal of British imperial forces by sea was underway, and declared:

"As far as this has proceeded, it has been successful."

Berlin reports said Nazi Stuka dive-bombers were blasting at British troop concentrations and speeding the last of the B. E. F. contingent toward a new Dunkerque. Hitler's high command said the Luftwaffe violently strafed British and Greek columns in the Argos-Tripolis area, in the heart of the Peloponnese.

This would indicate that the Allies so far had fallen back halfway across the Peloponnese, apparently fighting stiff rearguard actions to cover the withdrawal of the main B. E. F. body toward embarkation ports.

The German communiqué said operations were proceeding "on schedule."

Occupied Sunday, Athens was the 14th European capital brought under German domination, by diplomacy or blitzkrieg fury, since the Austrian Anschluss in March, 1938.

Approximately 1,000,000 square miles—an area greater than all of the United States east of the Mississippi—more than 170,000,000 population have fallen to the Reich.

Corfu Is Occupied

As the 23-day-old battle of the Balkans entered its final hour, Premier Mussolini's high command announced that Italian blackshirt troops had occupied the island of Corfu, off the Greek west coast, which guards the entrance to the Adriatic sea.

The Nazi high command's radio report on the fall of Athens said briefly:

"Troops of the German army fighting in Greece in pursuit of the enemy . . . arrived in Athens at 9:25 a. m. (Sunday)."

Nazi press reports said the city was taken without a fight—with no bomb or shell-fire destruction. The London radio said the last message broadcast by the Athens radio stated the capital was being bombed and the streets machine-gunned by German troops.

DNB, official German news agency, said German residents cheered as the Nazi legions marched in, while the Greeks looked on in stoic silence.

A new theatre of action appeared on the verge of opening with the French government's announcement that "Free French" forces under Gen. Charles De Gaulle, supported by British mechanized troops, were massed along the southern border of French Somaliland in East Africa.

De Gaulle's followers were reported to have concentrated at Daouanah, just inside French Somaliland, while others disembarked at Zeila, in adjoining British Somaliland.

German sources reported units of the Reich's fleet—possibly speedboats transported overland and submarines brought through the Dardanelles from the Black sea—had sailed with bombers in sinking 260,000 tons of shipping attempting to remove British forces from Greece since April 16.

Blames Fall of Yugoslavia
Churchill blamed the fall of Yugoslavia on the speed with which the Nazis struck, said Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's force in the winter drive across Libya never exceeded two divisions. He declared that thus Britain did not have a large force available to send to Greece, but added despite the smallness of the force that when Greece called for help "we could not say them nay."

The British took encouragement, too, from the arrival yesterday of the largest single contingent of Canadian trained fliers to reach the United Kingdom since the empire air training program was started.

The fliers arrived, along with thousands of Canadian fighting men, on a convoy they said crossed the icy, ice-infested Atlantic without sighting a submarine or hostile plane.

In Africa, the British reported the fall Saturday of Dessie, 140 miles northeast of Addis Ababa and one of the last Italian strongholds in Ethiopia.

Governor Vetoes Measure to Abolish Oral Examinations

Civil Service Promotion Plan Is Unaltered; Drunken Driving Proposal Signed

Albany, N. Y., April 28 (AP)—A proposed revision of the civil service law which in effect would abolish oral examinations for job promotions was vetoed by Governor Lehman today in belief it would "destroy the flexibility necessary in examination work."

The objection was cited to Lehman by the state civil service commission, which expressed opposition to any new law "to interfere with the work of developing the best examination techniques."

The bill, sponsored by Republican Senator Walter J. Mahoney, Buffalo, would have established a marking schedule based only upon written tests, seniority and record.

"Not all civil service positions are alike and the same examination technique cannot successfully be applied to all," the commission asserted.

Interest in the measure was heightened by the legislature's sanction of another proposal, waiting Lehman's action which would extend civil service to local government jobs in 44 counties.

With one week left of the 30 days given him to consider 1941 legislation, the governor brought new laws to 743 over the week-end by approving nearly two-score bills. Included were measures which:

Provide an extra hour of voting time in general elections throughout the state by closing polls at 7 p. m., instead of the present 6 p. m.

Analysis Is Evidence
Make the alcoholic content of the bloodstream, determined through medical or chemical analysis of breath, blood or saliva, legal evidence for or against an automobile driver charged with intoxication.

Approving the 13-hour voting day, the governor expressed hope it would "make unnecessary" calling the legislature into special session to extend balloting times in years of unusually heavy voting registration. Such sessions were held in 1938 and 1940.

The blood-test law permits, but does not mandate its use. Where utilized, the examination must be made within two hours after the driver's arrest.

Finding of 5/100 of one per cent or less alcoholic in the bloodstream becomes evidence the defendant is not intoxicated, 5/100 to 15/100 of one per cent is "relevant" but not prima facie evidence of intoxication, and more than 15/100 of one per cent is evidence of drunkenness.

The governor vetoed a measure which would have granted a $400 exemption from personal income taxes to any person having a child between 18 and 22 years of age in college. The present 18-year age maximum would continue for minor dependents not in school.

The governor also rejected a bill which would have required part payment of state aid for education (Continued on Page Five)

Supreme Court Gives Ruling on Labor

Washington, April 28 (AP)—The Supreme Court held today, in a far-reaching decision, that the Wagner act . . . labor act required a company to hire and give back pay to a person found by the labor board to have been denied work because of union membership or activities.

Justice Frankfurter delivered the decision, giving fresh interpretation to the meaning of the labor legislation.

At issue was validity of a labor board order directing the Phelps Dodge Corporation of New York to employ and give back pay to two men who were found to have been refused work because of union affiliation.

Coroner William E. Doulin of Newburgh said that death was due to a fractured skull. Miss Elizabeth Carpio of Kingston, who was riding on the back seat of the motorcycle, also was taken to St. Luke's, where it is reported she is under treatment for a fractured collar bone and an injury to her left side.

Purcell and Miss Carpio, with two other couples, also on motorcycles, left Kingston for a trip through the country, at 6:15 o'clock Sunday night and were returning home when the accident happened. ## Poskanzer Reports Effect of Conquests Are Felt in Nation

State Bar Ass'n Officer Addresses Ulster County Bankers; Lawatseh Is Made President

Effects of Hitler's conquests in Europe thus far are being felt in America, Robert C. Poskanzer indicated in a talk at the event held Saturday evening at Williams Lake by the Ulster County Chapter of the American Institute of Banking.

Mr. Poskanzer, treasurer of the State Bar Association and attorney for the National Commercial Bank and Trust Co., of Albany, was presented as the speaker of the evening to an estimated crowd of 75 men and women who attended the first annual dinner and dance of the local chapter.

The speaker reminded his audience of Hitler's brag to the effect that his new order would affect the world for the next 1,000 years. Even though the Nazi dictator has not yet conquered the old world, he said, the effects of his conquests are already being felt and he held it quite possible that even though Hitler did not win, his conquests might bring about a change in civilization which might have its effects for 1,000 years.

Under the general subject of present financial trends and social legislation of recent years, the speaker also touched upon the many social laws recently adopted to bring about an economic change in this country.

to contribute. We not only want the regulars, the men and women who year after year contribute to the "Y" program, but to the many others in the city who are in a position to give and to give generously.

Mayor C. J. Heiseleman, one of the co-chairmen, also spoke briefly to the workers. He said just imagine what would happen to Kingston if the "Y" ceased to function. It would be a black eye to the city. We have to stand behind the youth of the city, he said, calling attention to the fact that next year taxes would be greatly increased in the nation. They are going to take our money next year, said the mayor, let us let loose this year and give. I am going to contribute more this year than I have before, said the mayor, for I realize that in order to reach the goal set we have to raise more money. There was no reason, he said, why the goal should not be reached and passed.

The mayor paid a tribute to General Secretary George Goodfellow of the "Y" who, he said, had come to Kingston highly recommended. If he is going to do a good job for the youth of Kingston, said the mayor, we should help him. You can't help him by having unpaid bills hanging around his neck like a mill stone.

If the people of Kingston believe in the work of the "Y" they should help make this campaign an outstanding success, said the mayor, adding that there were many people here who were well able to support the "Y" and they should do so.

Secretary Goodfellow also spoke briefly and said he had been told that it had been a fine idea to induce Mr. Cashin to accept the general chairmanship of the drive. The question raised, said Mr. Goodfellow by a man who had talked with him was whether Mr. Cashin would work in the drive. That question is answered he said by the fact that even before the campaign had been launched Mr. Cashin had brought in $300 in contributions which represented contributions that were not made last year in the drive.

Mr. Cashin said that the other co-chairman of the drive this year was Supreme Court Justice Harry E. Schirck. The judge, he said, was holding a term of court in another county and was unable to be present, but he would be present at the dinner meetings before the campaign ends.

Principal Clarence Dunn of the Kingston High School, who is president of the board of directors of the "Y", presided at the dinner meeting and introduced Mr. Cashin. Mr. Dunn also spoke briefly of what the success of the drive would mean this year.

An innovation of the opening dinner meeting was the fine musical program rendered by an orchestra of high school students under the baton of Kenneth Appleton. Their appearance at the meeting had been due to the efforts of Superintendent of Schools Arthur Laidlaw.

The group of students from the Kingston High School Band was composed of Ward DuBois, Elmore Yellum, Lionel Gramer, Charles Campbell, Merrill Yaple, Gordon Kent, Eva Dunbar, Thomas Cresty, Raymond O'Reilly, Robert O'Reilly, Clyde Wonderly.

Legion's Birthday Party Is Success

More Than 500 Persons Attend Golden Rule Affair

With "Lazy Dan" the minstrel man headlining the many acts of entertainment last evening at Golden Rule Inn the annual American Legion birthday party held by the members of Kingston Post No. 150 proved to be one of the most successful ever held. According to William T. Roedell, chairman of the event, more than 500 were in attendance.

A WOR orchestra under the direction of Harry Scharp, played the music for dancing from 9 o'clock until about 11:30 o'clock, at which time the first part of the entertainment was presented. After this "Lazy Dan" appeared and took charge of the complete list of entertainers.

Past Commander Roedell opened the program on behalf of the American Legion and expressed his sincere appreciation to the sell-out turnout for their patronage and promised that the entertainment to follow would meet with their approval. Mr. Roedell then introduced Jerry Martin, commander of the post.

Throughout the entire list of speakers the work of Chairman Roedell was lauded. Mayor Conrad J. Heiseleman told the audience he was glad to be an American where he enjoyed the rights which are void for citizens of other countries. Mrs. Sam Mann, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, spoke briefly.

Previous to the short addresses Miss Myra Manning of the Chicago Opera Co. offered a few numbers starting with "Night and Day" and then singing a number of popular songs of years gone by.

Jimmy Shields Sings

Nine girls of the Jeanette Hackett dance revue started the entertainment in fine fashion and appeared twice more before the program concluded. Jimmy Shields, tenor, a special artist of Station WOR, came next and gave his rendition of "Begin the Beguine."

"On Blueberry Hill," "The Thrill Is Gone" and "My Wild Irish Rose." Mr. Shields' pleasing voice received a number of encores from the audience, which really appreciated the fine tenor voice of this young man.

"Lazy Dan" later gave his well-known monologue of a side-walk interview in which he took the parts of four other characters. From the time this radio entertainer started his career on the airwaves he has been known for this and last night's audience proved to be no exception. The master of ceremonies finished his short bit by singing "We Three in a Number of Ways."

Barbara Bellmore, exotic fan dancer, appeared on the program and also added acrobatic stunts to her act. Roberts and White, comedy dance team, appeared, followed by "The Assembly Line" by "God Bless America." Following this the WOR orchestra returned to the bandstand and played music for dancing until 3 o'clock.

Electrical Group Conducts School

Monthly Meeting Is Held at Local Hotel

A combined meeting of the Ulster County Electrical League was held last night at the Governor Clinton Hotel in Kingston, consisting of the regular monthly league meeting, and the seventh weekly session of the contractors' class on the National Electrical Code, which is open to all county electrical contractors whether or not they are members of the league.

Donald F. Bishop of West Shokan, the league president, conducted the meeting and appointed a special committee to plan the league's spring and summer program for promoting the increased use of adequate home wiring throughout the county, so that homes will be wired to use conveniently the many electrical conveniences and appliances which have become standard equipment in the average home.

This is especially important in view of the continually increasing home building activity in the county. The committee is composed of Herbert Myers of Kingston, chairman; Donald F. Bishop of West Shokan, Stanley Kelder of Accord, Joseph O'Connor of Bloomington, M. M. Peck and Henry Goldworthy of Kingston. The first meeting of this committee will be held next Tuesday evening.

The contractors' class with M. M. Peck of the Kingston office of the New York Fire Insurance Rating Organization in charge, discussed the subject of protecting electrical installations. Mr. Peck, who is assisted at these classes by Robert R. Crowell of the same office, illustrated the various installation details by blackboard diagrams. There were two visitors present at the class last night, Marshall G. Miller, superintendent of the Kingston fire alarm system, and William J. Slater of Poughkeepsie, president of the Dutchess County Electrical Contractors' Association, who was also a visitor last week. Regular members of the class were present from Kingston, Accord, Gardiner, Highland, Bearsville, West Hurley, West Shokan, Bloomington and Saugerties. The next meeting of the class will be held Thursday evening, May 1, at 7:45 o'clock, at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Library Board Meets In Quarterly Session

A quarterly meeting of the board of trustees of the Stone Ridge Library was held at the library last week. The Rev. Ivan Dykstra, pastor of the Stone Ridge Reformed Church, was welcomed as a new member of the board.

At this meeting board members were gratified to see hanging in the entrance hall of the library, the paintings of Garrett D. Lawrence Haabrook. These portraits were presented to the library by Mrs. Jonathan Dwight of New York and Mrs. E. C. Chadbourne of Stone Ridge had them reconditioned and hung.

The board members were also delighted with the progress on the museum which has been started upstairs over the library rooms. The public is invited to visit this museum as well as the library.

The librarian reported that he had received the yearly rating given by the state and that the Stone Ridge library had been given a rating of 120 per cent, which is well above the average of other libraries in the state.

At this meeting the board voted to have restored and rebound an old John Brown Bible, one of the second edition of the first Bible ever published in New York state, which had been donated by Miss Catherine Cantine of Stone Ridge. The Bible will be placed in the museum and will serve as a memorial to Dr. James Cantine who gave his time so long and faithfully as secretary and treasurer of the library board.

Plans were tentatively made for a series of teas to be held in the museum this summer for library association members. The annual benefit for the library will be held in July. Detailed plans for that event will be announced later.

Broadway Offers 'The Great Lie' With Bette Davis

The management of the Broadway Theatre has announced that the new Bette Davis picture, "The Great Lie," will open there today. Miss Davis is co-starred with George Brent in "The Great Lie," with Edward Grouce directing. This is the same brilliantly successful trio who gave such pictures as "The Old Maid" and "Dark Victory."

"The Great Lie" is an appealing modern love story centering about the eternal triangle, two women and a man. There was Maggie (Bette Davis), a natural wholesome girl, very much in love with her childhood sweetheart, Peter, but worried about his continual drinking.

There was Sandra, a brilliant concert pianist, selfish, neurotic and pleasure-loving. And there was Peter, torn between the two. He and Sandra marry after a particularly lively party she gives to celebrate her divorce. It turns out, however, that she celebrated prematurely, for her decree was not yet final. So it is that Peter flies down to Maggie's farm in Maryland and tells her that he is free, and also cured.

They marry, and to prove how he has reformed, Peter who is an experienced flyer, offers his service to the government for a special flying expedition through the jungles of Brazil.

It is only Maggie's infinite supply of tact and patience that gets them through the long ordeal which follows. When it is over Sandra gladly turns over the little boy and goes back to her old life of gayety. Maggie goes home to Maryland with her "son."

Congressmen Discuss How Far U.S. Patrol Will Extend And How It Will Aid Britain

Churchill's Broadcast Starts Speculation on Exact Status of U. S. 'Defense' Line

Norris Has View

Senator Says Convoys in Atlantic Might Encourage Tokyo

Washington, April 28 (AP)—Winston Churchill's high appraisal of the role of the United States navy's extended offshore patrol in the "battle of the Atlantic" aroused keen interest today on Capitol Hill.

Ever since President Roosevelt disclosed Friday that naval vessels were operating great distances at sea in the interests of hemisphere defense, many legislators have been frankly uncertain just what significance the widened patrol zone might play in the program of aid to Britain.

Mr. Roosevelt carefully avoided connecting the extension of the patrol with anything except defense considerations, but the words of Prime Minister Churchill yesterday were interpreted in a number of quarters as proof that the step was calculated, at least incidentally, to furnish the greatest help possible to the royal navy in maintaining Britain's North Atlantic life line.

The forcefulness of some of Churchill's phraseology attracted special notice. The prime minister spoke of the patrol extension as representing "tremendous decisions" which brought him "indefinite relief." He also said that the United States was extending Britain "naval support" within the limits of the patrol plan, and voiced the belief that this country did not intend to be "frustrated" in its policy by permitting lease-lend supplies to be sunk by Nazi action.

Meanwhile, Senators Norris (Ind.-Neb.) and Russell (D-Ga.) came out in favor of transferring more U. S. naval vessels to Britain before instituting convoys.

Norris, who fought unsuccessfully to have a prohibition against convoys written into the British-aid bill, told reporters he favored giving Britain battleships, cruisers or other fleet units needed to protect her Atlantic shipping.

If the United States itself should undertake convoy duty, he said, it might tie up most of the fleet in the Atlantic and thus lead Japan to try further expansion in the Pacific.

While saying he was anxious to see American supplies reach Britain, Russell informed reporters he did not yet favor convoys and would prefer the transfer of American warships to the British.

Senator Glass (D-Va.), strong supporter of administration foreign policy, told reporters he wanted "to deliver the goods" to Britain and added:

"I am in favor of conveying the goods we sell or give and if necessary, carrying them in our own merchant ships. It is time to start conveying now—we should have been doing it long ago."

An informal poll of the Senate, said to have been taken by leaders as a result of White House inquiries, indicated that at least 45 of the 95 members would oppose any legislation specifically authorizing conveying.

Approximately an equal number, it was said, would vote for the resolution by Senator Tobey (R-N. H.) to prohibit convoys if the proposal ever reached the floor for a vote.

Great Britain Focuses Attention Upon U. S. War Goods Shipments

Failure in Greece Produces Less Bad Feeling Than Fall of France Last Year; Churchill Reviews War in Light of American Aid

London, April 28 (AP)—Writing a tragic "finis" to the battle of Greece, the British press played up today Prime Minister Churchill's emphasis on United States aid in the battle of the Atlantic, but cautioned against expecting too much comfort from America after the important Balkan setback.

Official quarters declined to amplify the announcement of Australian Army Minister Percy C. Spender in Sydney that Australian troops already had started leaving Greece and there was a tendency here to speak of other things.

The allied failure in Greece produced less discouragement than the collapse of France last summer, and public attention focussed on the task of keeping supplies coming across the Atlantic.

The Manchester Guardian predicted that "in the future we shall see something like a division of labor between the American and British fleets, but a division of labor that does not break any political pledge."

The Daily Herald called for "the mood of the weeks after Dunkerque—a mood in which, by a united feat of organization, sacrifice and energy, historic miracles were performed."

This newspaper warned against writers and speakers who "still stick to their rose-colored spectacles . . . beaming in the direction of the United States."

The Daily Mail, commented: "Throughout this war whenever we have suffered a serious reverse there has been a tendency to turn to the United States for comfort."

"It is a tendency that can retard our own effort . . . the United States is giving us invaluable help. That help can not for some time to come be decisive."

Defense Officials Expect Long War

Plans Shaping for Greater Output of 'Arsenal' Than Any Foe Could Match

Washington, April 28 (AP)—Against the possibility that war may still be raging two years hence, defense officials are shaping plans for expanding output of the "arsenal of democracy" beyond the capacity of any possible foe.

Persons in close touch with the planners reported today that vast new bomber, ammunition and other arms plants were in the preliminary design stage and predicted requests to Congress for billions to build and operate them.

The program is based on estimates of the 1943 needs of United States armed forces and those of countries which this nation may then be supplying with munitions. The plans must be made well in (Continued on Page Five)

Lindbergh Resigns His Colonelcy

Sends Letter to F. D. R. in Reply to Press Conference Remarks on 'Copperheads'

Expresses Regret

Lindbergh Says He Will Serve His Country as Private Citizen

New York, April 28 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, in a letter to President Roosevelt, today resigned as a reserve officer in the United States army air corps.

The text of Colonel Lindbergh's letter follows:

My Dear Mr. President:

Your remarks at White House press conference on April 25 involving my reserve commission in the United States army air corps, have of course disturbed me greatly. I had hoped that I might exercise my right as an American citizen, to place my viewpoint before the people of my country in time of peace without giving up the privilege of serving my country as an air corps officer in the event of war.

But since you, in your capacity as President of the United States and commander in chief of the army, have clearly implied that I am no longer of use to this country as a reserve officer and in view of other implications that you, my President and my superior officer, have made concerning my loyalty to my country, my character, and my motives, I can see no honorable alternative to tendering my resignation as colonel in the United States army air corps reserve. I am, therefore, forwarding my resignation to the Secretary of War.

I take this action with the utmost regret, for my relationship with the air corps is one of the things that has meant most to me in life. I place it second only to my right as a citizen to speak freely to my fellow countrymen, and to discuss with them the issues of war and peace which confront our nation in this crisis.

I will continue to serve my country to the best of my ability as a private citizen.

Respectfully,

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH

The letter was dated April 25, 1941.

Called It Dumb

President Roosevelt, at his press conference last Friday, asserted that it was dumb to consider a Nazi victory inevitable and classed Col. Lindbergh with appeasers who urged peace during the Revolutionary and Civil Wars on the grounds that those wars could not be won.

Col. Lindbergh's name was brought into the discussion when a reporter asked why the flier had not been called into active service, although he held a commission in the air corps reserve.

Replying, Mr. Roosevelt said that during the Civil War numerous foreigners, liberty-loving people, fought on both sides, and that at the same time both sides led certain people go, that is, did not call them into service.

He said the people who were thus ignored were the Vallandighams. He explained that the Vallandighams were people who, from 1863 on, urged immediate peace, arguing that the north could not win the war between the states.

Clement L. Vallandigham was a member of the House from Ohio. In 1863 he was arrested for alleged "treasonable utterances" and banished to the Confederate states. He was known as a leader of the "Copperheads."

Germans Plant Swastika Over Acropolis in Athens; 2 Columns Pursue Retreating British

Greeks Ride to Surrender Parley

Athens Becomes 14th European Capital Under German Domination Since 1938

Corfu Is Taken

Italians Report Troops Occupy Island Off Grecian Coast

(By The Associated Press)
Adolf Hitler's swastika flag of conquest flew today over the ancient Acropolis in Athens, birthplace of the world's first democracy, while two German columns drove south across the Peloponnese in pursuit of retreating B. E. F. troops.

Australian Army Minister Percy C. Spender said the withdrawal of British imperial forces by sea was underway, and declared:

"As far as this has proceeded, it has been successful."

Berlin reports said Nazi Stuka dive-bombers were blasting at British troop concentrations and speeding the last of the B. E. F. contingents toward a new Dunkerque. Hitler's high command said the Luftwaffe violently strafed British and Greek columns in the Argos-Tripolis area, in the heart of the Peloponnese.

This would indicate that the Allies so far had fallen back halfway across the Peloponnese, apparently fighting stiff rearguard actions to cover the withdrawal of the main B. E. F. body toward embarkation ports.

The German communiqué said operations were proceeding "on schedule."

Occupied Sunday, Athens was the 14th European capital brought under German domination, by diplomacy or blitzkrieg fury, since the Austrian Anschluss in March, 1938.

Approximately 1,000,000 square miles—an area greater than all the United States east of the Mississippi—more than 170,000,000 population have fallen to the Reich.

Corfu Is Occupied

As the 23-day-old battle of the Balkans entered its final hour, Premier Mussolini's high command announced that Italian blackshirt troops had occupied the island of Corfu, off the Greek west coast, which guards the entrance to the Adriatic sea.

The Nazi high command's radio report on the fall of Athens said briefly:

"Troops of the German army fighting in Greece in pursuit of the enemy . . . arrived in Athens at 9:25 a. m. (Sunday)."

Nazi press reports said the city was taken without a fight—with no bomb or shell-fire destruction. The London radio said the last message broadcast by the Athens radio stated the capital was being bombed and the streets machine-gunned by German troops.

DNB, official German news agency, said German residents cheered as the Nazi legions marched in, while the Greeks looked on in stoic silence.

A new theatre of action appeared on the verge of opening with the French government's announcement that "Free French" forces under Gen. Charles De Gaulle, supported by British mechanized troops, were massed along the southern border of French Somaliland, East Africa.

De Gaulle's followers were reported to have concentrated at Daoudanah, just inside French Somaliland, while others disembarked at Zeila, in adjoining British Somaliland.

German sources reported units of the Reich's fleet—possibly speedboats transported overland and submarines brought through the Dardanelles from the Black sea—had joined with bombers in sinking 26,000 tons of shipping attempting to remove British forces from Greece since April 16.

Blames Fall of Yugoslavia
Churchill blamed the fall of Yugoslavia on the speed with which the Nazis struck, said that Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's force in the winter drive across Libya never exceeded two divisions. He declared that thus Britain did not have a large force available to send to Greece, but added despite the smallness of the force that when Greece called for help "we could not say them nay."

The British took encouragement, too, from the arrival yesterday of the largest single contingent of Canadian trained fliers to reach the United Kingdom since the empire air training program was started.

The fliers arrived, along with thousands of Canadian fighting men, on a convoy they said crossed the raider-infested Atlantic without sighting a submarine or hostile plane.

The British reported the fall Saturday of Dessie, 140 miles northeast of Addis Ababa and one of the last Italian strongholds in Ethiopia.

Governor Vetoes Measure to Abolish Oral Examinations

Civil Service Promotion Plan Is Unaltered; Drunken Driving Proposal Signed

Albany, N. Y., April 28 (AP)—A proposed revision of the civil service law which in effect would abolish oral examinations for job promotions was vetoed by Governor Lehman today in belief it would "destroy the flexibility necessary in examination work."

The objection was cited to Lehman by the state civil service commission, which expressed opposition to any new law "to interfere with the work of developing the best examination techniques."

The bill, sponsored by Republican Senator Walter J. Mahoney, Buffalo, would have established a marking schedule based only upon written tests, seniority and record.

"Not all civil service positions are alike and the same examination technique cannot successfully be applied to all," the commission asserted.

Interest in the measure was heightened by the legislature's sanction of another proposal, waiting Lehman's action which would extend civil service to local government jobs in 44 counties.

With one week left of the 30 days given him to consider 1941 legislation, the governor brought new laws to 743 over the week-end by approving nearly two-dozen bills. Included were measures which:

Provide an extra hour of voting time in general elections throughout the state by closing polls at 7 p. m., instead of the present 6 p. m.

Analysis Is Evidence

Make the alcoholic content of the bloodstream, determined through medical or chemical analysis of breath, blood or saliva, legal evidence for or against an automobile driver charged with intoxication.

Approving the 13-hour voting day, the governor expressed hope it would "make unnecessary" calling the legislature into special session to extend balloting times in years of unusually heavy voting registration. Such sessions were held in 1938 and 1940.

The blood-test law permits, but does not mandate its use. Where utilized, the examination must be made within two hours after the driver's arrest.

Finding of 5/100 of one per cent or less alcoholic in the bloodstream becomes evidence the defendant is not intoxicated, 5/100 to 15/100 of one per cent is "relevant" but not prima facie evidence of intoxication, and more than 15/100 of one per cent is evidence of drunkenness.

The governor vetoed a measure which would have granted a $400 exemption from personal income taxes to any person having a child between 18 and 22 years of age in college. The present 18-year age maximum would continue for minor dependents not in school.

The governor also rejected a bill which would have required part payment of state aid for edu- (Continued on Page Five)

Supreme Court Gives Ruling on Labor

Washington, April 28 (AP)—The Supreme Court held today, in a far-reaching decision, that the Wagner act . . . labor act required a company to hire and give back pay to a person found by the labor board to have been denied work because of union membership or activities.

Justice Frankfurter delivered the decision, giving fresh interpretation to the meaning of the labor legislation.

At issue was validity of a labor board order directing the Phelps Dodge Corporation, of New York, to employ and give back pay to two men who were found to have been refused work because of union affiliation.

Inwood Firemen Will Renew Search For F. W. Meserole, 29, Missing Hunter

The search for F. Wesley Meserole, 29-year-old Inwood volunteer fireman who disappeared on November 26, last, while on a hunting trip to the Catskills, will be renewed May 4 when volunteer firemen from his home town and as many local volunteer firemen as can be mustered again will comb the woods in the vicinity of North Dome mountain in hopes of solving the mystery.

Meserole's companions have asked that 11 available volunteers join in the search on Sunday, May 4, to search the woods on the wild slopes of North Dome mountain in the Catskills where it is believed the body of the missing hunter will be found. On top of North Dome, a 3,600-foot peak, was found a discharged gun shell which has been identified as having been shot from his gun. The area south of Spruett and two miles east of the Westkill post-office will be combed thoroughly in the hope the missing man will be found.

On November 26 Meserole went to the Catskills to hunt. He entered the woods headed toward North Dome mountain and has never been heard from since. That evening a heavy snow storm broke and left a foot of snow in the woods. The woods were searched last fall but winter snows made it impossible to carry on the search. On January 1 a discharged gun shell was found on top of the mountain where Mink Hollow and Broadstreet Hollow come together. (Continued on Page Two)

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Freeman Special News Service)

British Premier Churchill, in giving an accounting of his stewardship to his beleaguered people last night, declared that the war may spread but that Hitler can win it only by conquering England herself, either by invasion or by cutting her ocean lifeline to the United States.

That victory does depend on subjugation of the British Isles—mainly on the part of resistance—has come to be regarded almost as a truism by military experts, even in Berlin. It is significant, therefore, to see the Nazis apparently getting set for major operations in connection with the subsidiary battle of the Mediterranean. They no longer talk of a "blitzkrieg" in connection with England.

It is doubly interesting in view of the fact that even now Herr Hitler's forces are swarming among the monuments of ancient Greek civilization, putting the finishing touches to the job of existing the allies from their last toe-hold on the European continent. That is, the last except for the burning hearts of the many conquered peoples who are waiting for a chance to revolt against their German masters.

The Fuehrer is ruler of that vast territory right up to the Russian border. And many observers express the belief that he is debating whether to strike at the Moscovites in an effort to extend his domination to them and gather to himself the riches of the Soviet Ukraine.

Answer Is Twofold

Why don't the Nazis devote their entire energy to the crushing of England, if the outcome of the war depends on this? Why waste golden hours of operations which admittedly are subsidiary to the main business in hand? The answer to this is twofold.

Despite the invincibility displayed by the German fighting machine on land, Hitler thus far hasn't developed the strength to crush Britain by blitzkrieg. Indeed, she has grown immeasurably stronger during the year in which he has been trying to knock her out.

The Fuehrer needs to tap new sources of supply, for Europe is becoming a land of disorganization and want. Therefore the battle of the Mediterranean isn't any means directed solely to the support of the assault on the British Isles. That is one purpose, of course, but the other is to get the oil of Iraq, the foodstuffs of the Near East, and the cotton of Egypt.

All this doesn't mean that there will be any slackening of the Nazi attack on Britain. However, despite the terrific inroads which Hitler is making on shipping, it takes a bit of time to sink the vast allied merchant fleet. And the English channel, with its churning currents, presents a fierce barrier to invasion, especially since the Germans haven't the air control essential to this operation, which is considered one of the most difficult of military history.

This is it that the Nazis are making widespread preparations for extending the war in the Mediterranean theatre. The most active point at the moment is the Egyptian-Libyan border where the Axis forces are increasing their pressure, and Saturday night crossed the frontier at several points. This thrust is a direct threat to Egypt and the Suez Canal—key positions in the British control of the Mediterranean.

Britain's Chief Problem

With Turkish support of the allies on the doubtful list, Britain's chief problem is to assemble quickly an army powerful enough to defend the canal and Egypt either from an Axis thrust from Libya or through Turkey, Syria and Palestine. It is quite possible that Hitler may undertake offensives against the canal from both the east and west simultaneously, with the idea of getting the British in a vise.

If the Germans can secure passage through Turkey, either by consent or by force, the British will be on a tough spot, for the Nazi chief can throw a vast and powerfully equipped army against them.

Churchill last night asserted that "Hitler cannot find safety from avenging justice in the east, middle east or far east." It is true, as already pointed out, that the war cannot be won in the Mediterranean, but it is equally true that the loss of Egypt and the Suez Canal would weaken Britain terribly.

Because of a shortage of electric power in Mexico, Mexico City's 65th motion picture theatre, built recently at a cost of $750,000, cannot open.

GERMANS ENTER GREEK CAPITAL

The hill in the background is the Acropolis, citadel of Athens, as it appears from Constitution Square in the heart of the Greek capital. The Parthenon surmounts the Acropolis. Athens fell to Adolf Hitler's legions after 21 days of fighting. The vanguard of Nazi motorcyclists roared into the center of the city and the swastika was promptly hoisted over the Acropolis.

NAZI TANKS ROLL ON RAILROAD TRACKS

German heavy tanks roll into Larisa, Greece, over railroad tracks, as Nazi forces occupy the city. In the background is the Polikastell fortress. German Panzer and motorcycle troops, apparently seeking to conclude the battle of Greece speedily by encircling Athens and seizing the Isthmus to the Peloponnese, fought a grim Australian force on the slopes of Mount Gheraneia, about 25 miles due west of Athens. (Picture radioed from Berlin to New York.)

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?

Defense Garden Program Should Fit Family Needs

Good Planning Will Give Balanced Diet.

Maximum benefits from the Defense Garden are reaped when all work is done by the owner. The size of the most profitable garden will therefore depend upon the amount of leisure the owner has, and his inclination to do gardening work.

Unless the product of the home garden is needed for food which could not be purchased, it is not wise to plant a larger space than will be well tended. Two hours on each of three days a week devoted to this leisurely, pleasant and healthful physical recreation will take good care of a garden 30 by 40 feet or thereabouts; and from this space can be harvested vegetables sufficient for the average family, except for potatoes and sweet corn.

In deciding what shall be grown, these crops may be considered as necessary in most sections of our country.

Beans, Parsnips, Lima beans, Parsley, Beets, Peppers, Carrots, Onion sets, Cabbage, Peas, Chard, Radishes, Cucumbers, Swiss chard, Lettuce, and Tomatoes.

Eliminate, of course, those you do not like, and remember that it is better to grow small amounts of many things than to devote your entire area to relatively few vegetables which will likely be overproduced, and give you a monotonous diet.

One of the great advantages of the home garden is the opportunity it gives to grow annual vegetables which you might not otherwise try. To replace items eliminated from the above list, or to add to it if you have the space, here are some suggestions:

Brussels sprouts for fall crop; celery, broccoli, especially the green sprouting, Chinese cabbage for fall salads; savoy cabbage, a great delicacy; chicory or endive for fall green salads; collards, corn salad, eggplant, celeriac, cress, kale, kohlrabi, leek, melons, mustard greens, pumpkin, okra, oyster plant, spinach, squash, both the winter kind and the summer varieties which are so delicious in the baby stage, especially the vegetable marrow; and turnips and rutabagas, which are especially successful in sections which have an early spring and late fall.

A ramble through your seed catalogue will produce other suggestions which should be considered in making up your seed order. Some new vegetable or variety added to your list will give you more pleasure than the staples, and it will be something to serve your friends when they come to dine.

GRANGE NEWS

To Hold Banquet

Ulster Grange, No. 969 of Ulster Park will celebrate its 38th anniversary tonight with a banquet at Golden Rule Inn at 7 o'clock.

The Grange was organized on April 3, 1903, but this is the nearest date the committee could arrange for its celebration. The banquet is not for Grange members exclusively, for any friend of the Grange can attend by making reservations with Mrs. William Hendrikx, Ulster Park, or calling directly at the Inn. Mrs. Hendrikx is chairman of the committee in charge.

State Grange Overseer, Henry D. Sherwood and Mrs. Sherwood of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, will be among the guests. Master A. L. Lefever will act as toast master. All members of Ulster Grange are urged to attend.

Archbishop Spellman Ordained 25 Years Ago

Dioscesan observance of the 25th anniversary of the ordination of Archbishop Francis J. Spellman will be marked by a pontifical Mass celebrated by the archbishop in St. Patrick's Cathedral on May 11 at 11 o'clock. Each of the 37 parishes in the archdiocese have been invited to send two members of the laity as representatives. The pontifical Mass on May 11 will be the first of three Masses marking the anniversary.

The actual anniversary date falls on the following Wednesday, May 11, when the archbishop will celebrate Mass in the chapel of St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie, in the presence of the faculty and students. On the following day, the anniversary of his first Mass, he will offer a pontifical Mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral at 11 o'clock, to which the bishops of the neighboring dioceses and the clergy and religious of the New York archdiocese have been invited.

Senator Williamson's Wife Dies at White Plains

White Plains, N. Y., April 28 (AP)—Mrs. Jane Humes Williamson of Scarsdale, wife of Senator Pliny W. Williamson, Republican, died at White Plains Hospital last night after an illness of six months.

She was the daughter of James and Anna Davenport Humes and was born in Cortland, N. Y. She was graduated from Cortland Normal School and Vassar College and had been for many years active in the civic and philanthropic work of Scarsdale and county organizations.

Mrs. Williamson is survived by her husband, two children, Andrew Williamson of Scarsdale and Mrs. Jane W. Hackett of New Castle, Delaware, and three grandchildren, Andrew Williams 3d, Nancy Hackett and Patricia Hackett.

Funeral ceremonies will be held next Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Williamson home, 11 Heathcote Road, Scarsdale.

Junior Gardeners At Industrial Home

At the Industrial Home eight boys over the age of 10 have formed a garden club under the leadership of the Rev. S. W. Ryder. The boys' election campaign was swift and sure. The most aggressive boy was made president; the most dependable boy is now the vice president; and the role of secretary was given to the best scholar. Their aim is to raise vegetables and grow potatoes and, as usual, the good friends of the Home are looked upon as silent partners. One has already sent a load of manure; the tractor of another friend is turning over the soil; seed potatoes are promised; and further wishful thinking goes toward vegetable plants. The study of seed catalogs opens up a new world of facts and values. Such terms as "home defense" and "conservation" are taking on a real meaning for the young gardeners.

Four-Child Families Urged

If America wishes to continue as a first rate power a Harvard sociologist has said, the normal family must include four children instead of the "ideal" two. "At the present rate of births our population is destined for a decrease in numbers," Prof. Carl C. Zimmerman asserted in a prepared address before the New England Conference on Tomorrow's Children. Of any normal 2,000 babies born, Dr. Zimmerman said, 940 will be females, of which 700 will grow up to marry and somewhat more than 600 will bear children. Thus, in order to sustain a population each family must bear between three and four children on the average.

Inwood Firemen Will Renew Search For F. W. Meserole, 29, Missing Hunter

This shell has been positively identified as having been fired from his gun and it is believed that somewhere in that locality his body will be found.

The Mink Hollow mentioned is not the one in Ulster county beyond Lake Hill, but is in Greene county near Sprucon.

This is an extremely wild country bounded roughly by the Phoenicia-Hunter road on the east, the Hunter-Lexington road to the north, Lexington-Shandaken road to the west and the Shandaken-Phoenicia road to the south.

The point where the shell was found is east of the dome of North Dome and near a lake. The search was halted January 12 because of severe snow storms.

The posse which will enter the woods will be in charge of firemen, forest rangers, game wardens and men who know the woods. The Conservation Department will provide maps and the search will be under the direction of Charles Stewart of Tannersville, president of the Greene County Firemen's Association and Seth T. Cole of Catskill, chairman of the law committee of the New York State Volunteer Firemen's Association.

All volunteer firemen are asked to report to the Community Hall at Westkill by 8 a. m. Sunday, May 4, when the search will be started. The hall will be open the night before for those who care to spend the night there. Searchers are asked to bring blankets but coffee and sandwiches will be provided at the community hall.

Any Ulster county volunteer firemen who can aid in the search are asked to join the party. There will be many woodsmen familiar with the country who will be under the guidance of Forest Rangers and Conservation men.

The Inwood department will send up a large force of men to aid in the search for their missing member.

Newark, N. J., April 28 (AP)—Charles (The Bug) Workman pleaded innocent today to an indictment accusing him of slaying Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, Bronx beer baron, in a Newark tavern six years ago. Essex County Judge Walter D. Van Riper fixed May 19 for start of the trial.

Britain Focuses*Attention on Aid

Britain because of the United States' decision to patrol the waters of the western hemisphere, Prime Minister Churchill declared in a Sunday broadcast to the empire and America.

"When I said 10 weeks ago 'give us the tools and we will finish the job I meant give them to us, put them within our reach,' Churchill asserted, 'and that is what it now seems Americans are going to do and that is why I feel a very strong conviction that though the battle of the Atlantic will be long and hard and its issue by no means yet determined it has entered upon a more grim but at the same time a far more favorable phase."

Although expressing confidence in ultimate victory, the prime minister, in a 30-minute war review, told his listeners "we must now expect the war in the Mediterranean, on the sea, in the desert and above all in the air to become very fierce, varied and widespread."

"The war may spread to Spain and Morocco. It may spread eastwards to Turkey and Russia. The Germans may lay their hands for a time upon wheat lands of the Ukraine and oil wells of the Caucasus."

"But there is one thing which is certain . . . Hitler cannot find safety from avenging justice in the east, middle east, or far east. In order to win this war he must either conquer this land by invasion or he must cut the ocean lifeline which joins us to the United

Defeat for Axis Certain

But, Churchill continued, "no prudent and far-seeing man can doubt that eventual and total defeat of Hitler and Mussolini is certain in view of the respective and clear resolve of the British and American democracies."

"There are less than seventy million malignant Huns, some of whom are curable and others killable . . . The people of the British empire and the United States number nearly two hundred millions in their homelands and in British dominions alone . . . They are determined that the cause of freedom shall not be trampled down."

He said the winning of the battle of the Atlantic was imperative and that that was why he learned with "indescribable relief" of President Roosevelt's patrol decision, which he said would make it possible for Britain to concentrate on ocean routes nearer home.

Touching on other phases of the war, the prime minister said General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's force in the winter drive against the Italians in Libya never exceeded two divisions—about 30,000 men. Despite the smallness of the force, however, when Greece called for help "we could not say them nay."

Churchill referred contemptuously to Mussolini as "this whipped jackal Mussolini, who to save his own skin made all Italy a vassal state to Hitler."

He blamed the "tragedy" of Yugoslavia on the speed of the German armies and confessed that the German columns in Libya "advanced sooner and in greater strength than we or our generals expected."

In the final analysis, however, "The British . . . mean to conquer or die," Churchill declared. "We may be confident we shall give very good account of ourselves. More than that it would be boastful to say. Less than that it would be foolish to believe."

Greek Cash 'Frozen'

Washington, April 28 (AP)—President Roosevelt issued an executive order today freezing Greek credits and cash in the United States immediately. The action took cognizance of the conquest of Greece by Germany. It was designed to keep Greek credits or cash in this country from German hands. Similar orders were issued after other European countries had been conquered by Germany.

advance because even under emergency pressure it takes a year or more to build, equip and start production in complex arms factories.

For example, construction has yet to start on the second big program of munitions plants, construction for which Congress has provided more than $1,500,000,000. These plants, including upwards of 30 ordnance factories and a major expansion of the aircraft industry, are not expected to reach the full production stage until well into 1942.

Poskanzer Reports Effect of Conquests Are Felt in Nation

ment of our help, labor union picketing and many other things, which were considered impossible, but a few years ago are here today by authority of new laws. All these changes he classified as a "peaceful revolution" which was gradually reshaping our country.

Group Congratulated
In all this change in our mode of living and existing, he said, figured the need for better educated and better equipped men to cope with these "trying times" in our history. He congratulated the men and women who had sought greater knowledge of banking by attending the A. I. B. school during the past months.

The dinner and dance was in celebration of the closing of the first local "school" for bank officials and employees. During the past winter the Institute held a 20-week session at the high school with Ellis F. Auer, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce as instructor.

Victor H. Roth of the Kingston Trust Co., president of the county chapter, presided at the meeting, and at the outset thanked the members of the Board of Education for the instruction courses and praised the competency of the instructor, Mr. Auer, and then called upon Toastmaster Walter L. Foster of the National Ulster County Bank, to carry on.

Class Thanked
Mr. Auer was presented and briefly thanked the members of the class for their attendance during the past winter at the school, and he expressed the hope that the first sessions of the school would prove so interesting and valuable to those who took it that next year more would take the course.

Toastmaster Foster then presented a number of the guests and banking officials present including: John Sax, president of the State of New York National Bank; Harold Wood, of the Kingston National Bank of New Paltz; A. J. Anderson of the Kerhonkson National Bank; William Van Etten of the Kingston Trust Co.; Arthur Davis, treasurer of the Kingston Trust Co.; Charles Snyder, cashier of the National Ulster County Bank; William Buddenhagen of the First National Bank; Holt N. Winfield, Kingston Savings Bank; E. Frank Flanagan, of the Kingston Savings and Loan Association; David Terry, Ernest LeFever and Gordon Craig, Kingston Trust Co.; Robert Murray, of the State of New York National Bank, and other employees of various banks.

Superintendent of Schools, Arthur J. Laidlaw and President Alfred Schmid of the Board of Education were also present.

Norman H. Polhemus, president of the Dutchess County Chapter of A. I. B., was also introduced.

Fred Van Deusen, Kingston's man of mystery, entertained with several of his tricks of magic even producing before the bankers eyes a new dollar bill from the center of a lemon.

Awards to those who led their classes in the recent A. I. B. examinations were not been received from New York. To the one in the class having the best mark goes $10 and to the second highest $5.

Officers of the Ulster County Chapter of the A. I. B. were elected by unanimous choice following the report of Raymond W. Garrahan, chairman of the nominating committee. Those elected were:

Oscar J. Lavatsch, State of New York National Bank, president; A. J. Anderson, Kerhonkson National Bank, vice president; H. Edgar Freese, Kingston Trust Co., secretary; Walter L. Foster, National Ulster County Bank, treasurer. Directors named are: Victor Roth, Harold Wood and H. V. W. Darrow.

President-elect Lavatsch spoke briefly, thanking the group for the honor conferred upon him and asking for the same hearty support during the coming year as was given to the retiring president, Victor H. Roth. Mr. Lavatsch said that of the 40 who took the final examinations, all but a couple had passed with splendid marks and he urged that those who desired to take the course next season enroll early.

To Go in Army
Vincent J. Wolfenstein, the retiring secretary, was introduced and given a hand by his fellow

Thursday Will Be Child Health Day Throughout U. S.

Thursday, May 1, has been designated as Child Health Day throughout the nation, and today Dr. L. E. Sanford, city health officer, issued the following statement regarding the observance of the day and what it signified:

May 1 has been designated throughout the country as Child Health Day. Also here in the Hudson Valley during this month our annual blossom festival is held in which we pay tribute to spring-time and beauty.

At this time from many contestants a queen of beauty is chosen to reign for the day. What do the judges see when they gaze upon all these—they see youthful beauty, charm and health. From these they make their choice. Not all of us can be beautiful, most can cultivate a charming personality, but greater than all and which surely should be present in the youth of the land is radiant health.

Every child has the right of being well born. From then on it is the duty of the parents to protect and care for him until he is able to care for himself. Many times in the stress and strain of everyday life parents either through utter indifference or because of constant association fail in their duties toward their children.

Today health departments, the medical profession, health organizations are laboring constantly to assist parents in maintaining the highest degree of health for their children. What methods have they instituted for this purpose—prenatal blood, Wasserman tests, on all prospective mothers eliminates the likelihood of congenital syphilis.

Prenatal clinics give examinations and instructions to prospective mothers, so necessary during this period. Improved services at the time of the child's birth. Intensified study in the care of premature babies. Well baby and child consultation clinics, so important to the child and of great educational value to the parent. Protection against smallpox, diphtheria and other preventable diseases. Pre-school consultation clinics and mental hygiene clinics. Extensive work in discovering the presence of early tuberculosis in children. Orthopedic clinics for the benefit of those suffering defects of this kind, especially occurring as a result of infantile paralysis. Establishing by the Department of Education of a medical system including doctors, dentists and nurses whereby school children are given an annual examination for the purpose of discovering and correcting all physical defects possible.

All these and many more are the advantages which parents and children possess today to a greater extent than ever before.

The result should be a stronger, healthier race of people, better equipped to fight the battle of life.

State Police Are Working On Defense Traffic Plans
Troy, N. Y., April 28 (AP)—State police escorts would speed up passenger cars and sidetrack heavy trucks under tentative army and police plans for conveying large-scale troop movements over New York highways.

Other proposals State Police Chief Inspector Albert B. Moore disclosed Saturday at the annual state police traffic school at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute include:

Suspension of city and village traffic light systems and manual direction of traffic; relay of traffic information by teletype and radio to keep roads clear; and supplying by military authorities, before entering the state, of their point of entry, exit, number, weight and length of vehicles, number of men and commanding officer.

Moore, answering a question, also asserted plans for evacuating New York city are progressing.

"Naturally, I can't say anything about them," he added.

Will Have Savings Stamps
The first line of "merchandise" for the sale men will be the savings stamps, really an adaptation of the postal savings stamps which have been sold at postoffices for many years. They are in denominations of 10, 25, and 50 cents, $1 and $5. Buyers receive little albums to paste them in—albums designed so that when full they can be exchanged for baby bonds. These stamps earn no interest but can be redeemed for cash at face value at any time.

The next line consists of "Series E" bonds. These are almost exactly the same as the "baby bonds" which have been sold since 1935. They are in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $500, $1,000, sell at 75 per cent of face value (a $25 bond is sold for $18.75), and increase in value every six months so that they reach full face value at the end of 10 years. If held 10 years, they earn the equivalent of 2 1/2 per cent interest.

For more affluent investors, the treasury has designed "Series F and Series G" bonds in denominations running up to $10,000. One bears no interest but is sold at a discount like the "Series S" bonds, and the other is sold at face value and bears 2 1/2 per cent interest.

Local Man Killed In Cycle Accident

George Haley of 61 Downs street, Mrs. Haley said that Purcell's machine was in the lead, with the others some distance back, so that they did not know what had happened until they came up to the scene of the accident.

Purcell, who was unconscious, and Miss Carpino, were taken to St. Luke's in an ambulance from that institution, which had been summoned by their companions.

The body was turned over to the Henry J. Bruck Home for Funerals, 27 Smith avenue, Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock. A solemn high Mass or requiem will be offered for the repose of his soul at St. Mary's Church at 10 a. m. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Deceased is survived by his mother, Mrs. Asa Purcell Beesmer of 85 Garden street and by one sister, Mrs. Chester Joy, also of this city.

Annual Sale for Blind Opens in City

The annual Kingston sale for the blind opened at 279 Fair street on Thursday afternoon with many useful household articles made by the blind. In the top photo customers mill through the store examining the merchandise which consists of rugs, baskets, brooms, broom covers, towels, mats, etc. At left is Miss Doris Hamma of Kingston, who will be graduated from the Batavia High School in a few weeks. She is shown here demonstrating reading and writing by the Braille method at the sale.

The general chairman of the sale is Mrs. Harris Brown, and the general treasurer is Miss Margaret D. W. Treadwell.

ment today on Charles A. Lindbergh's resignation as a colonel in the air corps reserve.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said that a letter from Lindbergh to President Roosevelt, announcing the resignation, had not yet been received at the White House.

Army officials also declined comment except to say that it was the war department's general policy not to accept resignations from reserve officers during the emergency period.

It was pointed out, however, that no regulations covered the point and the question of acceptance or rejection of the flier's resignation was entirely optional with the secretary of war.

F. D. Knapp Dies
Greenwich, Conn., April 28 (AP)—Fred D. Knapp, 88, oldest active undertaker in the state, died today at his home after a two weeks illness. He was the founder of the undertaking firm of Fred D. Knapp and Son, member of many fraternal groups and former town official. Knapp was a former tax collector, health officer and constable here and from 1870 to 1875 served as a captain in the Connecticut National Guard. A daughter survives.

Will Present Monologues
On Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 6:05 over the local station, WKNY, there will be a series of five-minute transcribed monologues presented by Bundles for Britain. Three outstanding dramatic artists, Maurice Evans, Walter Hampden, and Cornelia Otis Skinner, are donating their services to Bundles for Britain.

Sightless Alone Benefit by Sale Made in Kingston

All who patronize the Kingston Sale for the Blind now being held at 279 Fair street are giving direct aid to many blind workers, for there is no profit in these sales as the selling price of each article is made up of the cost of materials plus the wage paid the sightless producer. Therefore, the blind workers are the only beneficiaries.

The expense of operating the sales and shops for the blind are met by private subscriptions. When visiting the sale all are asked to visit for a moment with Doris Hamma, a Kingston blind girl, who is about to graduate from the New York State School for the Blind.

Heavy rubber door mats made of new moulded rubber in attractive colors and designs are on sale. They are the most substantial and desirable door mat on the market, and are sold at bargain prices.

The general chairman of the sale is Mrs. Harris Brown, and the general treasurer is Miss Margaret D. W. Treadwell.

The assignments of time and the committees which will serve Tuesday are as follows:
9 a. m. 12 noon—Roundout Presbyterian.
12 noon-3 p. m.—Clinton Avenue Methodist.
3 p. m.-5:30 p. m.—Temple Emanuel.

Well, the annual baseball tussle is under way again with major, minor and bush league athletes muscling up more enthusiasm than a kid in a candy shop. It's too early to pick pennant winners—but everybody's doing it. There are more baseball games out on the end of a limb now than there are nuts on a pecan tree. One thing that may upset all the predictions is the Selective Service. Baseball teams have a habit of picking up the healthiest young Americans they can find—and that goes double for the S.S. Fans would like to change the old nursery rhyme to "Draft, Draft, go away—little Johnnie wants to play—come again some other day." However, it looks like the boys are going to have to "play ball" in more ways than one.

And, speaking of playing, there will be plenty of "horse play" at the Annual Minstrel Show of the Fair St. Reformed Men's Club Friday Evening at 8:15 at the Fair St. Reformed Church.

Are You Poor?

Do you walk beside a rosebush and never look its way? To admire its lovely blossoms all decked in bright array? Do you roam amid a woodland and fail to note the trees? Or the tracery of grasses—that tremble in the breeze? Do you walk where birds are singing and never hear them sing? As they fly to azure skyways with blithe, unfettered wing? Do you ever see the sunset with tints of flaming hue? Or the glory of the sunrise that starts the day for you? Do you pass that troubled neighbor and fail to grasp his hand? With a grip that he would welcome and truly understand? If these simple things you're missing, not far from your own door, No gold will ever satisfy for you are, O, so poor!

My dreams are mine to have and hold.

My dreams are mine forever. The years drift by, and I grow old.

But my dreams, they leave me never.

I may not get my heart's desire—

The fairer my dreams shall be, Life may put out my blazing fire—

It cannot extinguish me.

If all my dreams came true, ah, me,

My dreams would then be dead;

Better to yearn for the never-to-be

Than wear a dreamless head!

For the dreams of youth and the dreams of age

Are nature's kindly lure

To beguile the feet of fool and sage

And make his path secure.

The Wheels are Turning Faster Every Day

Those who lose sleep over the seemingly interminable delays in getting rearmament started in America may take some comfort from the fact that our productive strength—or what one commentator calls our "wallop index," is two and a half that of Germany, including all its conquered territories. It takes time to make a sound beginning towards big time production involving new designs, new plants, new machinery, new tools, and new methods—but once we are geared up, just wait us go! And if the present destruction continues in Europe and Asia, the peak of our strength is likely to synchronize with the peak of the dictators' weakness. So, while it's natural and right to be impatient, it looks as if we'd get full and complete time to see that the ensuing peace shall not mark the end of human liberty.

Someday I'll Find You

YESTERDAY, Eileen Gardner just sent her would-be fiancé Jordan Eastill packing. She has decided that she must take a chance that her job singing on an obscure radio station will lead to a better job in New York, and that it may reestablish contact with the handsome stranger she knows only as Martin. But now she and the Weigands, who own the station, have quarreled just when a New York company has shown interest in her work.

Chapter 12
New York—or Bust!

MOLLY poked her. "Wait, kid. Think it over. Give 'em our answer in half an hour. You practically have 'em on toast," she added in a whisper. "Come along."

"Yes—think it over, my dear Eileen," Mrs. Weigand said.

Eileen, still angry, said, "All right, I'll let you know, then, Mrs. Weigand. But I don't think I'll change my mind. It's all pretty horrid."

The girls went out.

"Now," Molly pointed out, "the thing for you to do is to come back into our nice cool palazzo, and figure out the strategy. I think I have an ice thermos and some coke. Come along," she said again.

Once inside, the girls lying on the couch and drinking the iced stuff, Eileen was able to relax, and see the amusing side of the absurd scene.

"It's like this," Molly pointed out. "You believe you got all the dirt in Pute about the Weigands. Mrs. Has to think that everythin' belongs to her is wonderful and perfect and sought after. And lookit what she's got. And what she's got, being male, doesn't need much luckin' up to think himself perfectly entranced. His one outlet is this occasional reaching. They put on this brainstorm about once a season, and it keeps 'em both believing in themselves."

"All right. That doesn't make it any nicer for me," Eileen said shortly. "I'm going."

Molly sat up cross-legged. She dropped her bottle, and fixed her eyes on her friend.

"I been earnin' a living since I was fifteen. You just started," she said. "You got looks and brains and drive, but you don't know all I know, stands to reason. If you quit now, you quit your first job under a cloud. Besides, this is a bad time. Nothing doing in most lines. Of course you can go back and stay with your aunt. But the concert in Denver won't happen till October. Your friend Jordan Eastill—what about him?"

"Teaching summer school in Boulder."

"Just so. Muss up his plans to get married. I should say; and instructors have to watch their step too."

"I'm not marrying Jordan," Eileen interrupted.

"You could use your savings up going back to live with Auntie. If she isn't taking a course herself somewhere, I don't know middle-aged schoolteachers—or else a trip."

"It was a trip, Yosemite."

"Uh-huh. Now listen, baby. Hold on another two weeks, and then go back to Denver, where the boy friend and the jobs and the aunts will all be waiting. Also you'll have kept your contract, and got a little piece of royalty on those recordings. And left no small behind you with these freaks. Just carry on and then go back with a halo and pick up the Denver concert work. Don't be silly."

Eileen rose and began to walk up and down. Molly was probably right. But—Denver—which meant Jordan. . . . Well, after all, fate also seemed to mean Jordan. Certainly, stay or go for the present, the path seemed to lead back to Denver, an occasional piece of concert work—possibly a secretarial job like the one somebody else had taken, for a while—and Jordan.

"I guess I'm crazy," Eileen told Molly. "I said anxiously, 'I'm glad. You see, I have to go East pretty soon now, and I'd hate to leave you all tangled up. I heard about it, today.'"

She pushed her hand down into the pocket of her slacks, and pulled out a commercial-looking letter. Something else fell out, and both girls bent to retrieve it. A sheet of yellow paper.

Second Message

"WHAT'S that?" Eileen demanded, catching her breath. "Gosh, I forgot, it was a message for you. Here, catch."

Molly, who had reached it first, thrust it at Eileen.

"Nick says he can use me at the delicatessen," she went on, "till the fall job starts again. And from what he says, I'd better be back to ride herd on his, he's losin' his nerve about the florist shop, he's scared to take out the notes—Hey, Eileen, you're not listening, is it the dream here?"

Eileen was not listening. She was reading and rereading the line of typewriting.

"You didn't tell me yours, either. Just found cable. Flying home. See you in New York, starting on the big networks. Martin."

"Did you read it?" Eileen asked Molly.

A large attendance is requested as several matters of importance will be discussed.

To Give Minstrel

The annual minstrel show given by the Men's Club of the Fair Street Church will be held Friday evening, May 2, at 8:15 o'clock at the assembly room in the church basement. In addition to the usual minstrel show, in which several of Kingston's best known minstrel men will appear, there will also be a program of varied entertainment. On the program will be Carolyn Penzato and "Tommy," ventriloquist team from New Paltz. Miss Penzato appeared at the Federation of Men's Club party this spring at the Municipal Auditorium where she made a hit. Since then she has prepared an entirely new act in preparation for a motion picture try-out.

Then he moved five miles across town, to 2606 East Tenth street. The dog, missing a year, turned up in the new location scratching at the door.

Minute Men of '41 Will Be Trained to Meet Emergencies

This is the first disclosure of complete plans for U. S. civilian defense. For it Miss Arne obtained information from many government agencies.

By SIGRID ARNE
AP Feature Service Writer
Washington—Behind the scenes a master plan is being completed here to train millions of minute men to protect the civilian population—if war should come to the United States.

There is no prediction here that war will come. But army men say it would be official negligence, in these days of total warfare, not to train civilians to protect themselves.

This master plan includes the program for housing and adequate food about which you have heard much already. But the nub of the plan lies in giving civilians rehearsals in fighting fires, dealing with incendiary bombs, protecting water supplies, augmenting communication lines, spotting invading air fleets—the defense techniques the British had to learn when war was upon them.

Many government specialists have cooperated for months on these plans: Army and navy men, chemists, radio men, conservationists, communications experts and doctors. They have been assisted by dozens of trained civilians.

Neighborhood Affair
Training will be given to police and fire fighters. But the plan also calls for you and your neighbor and the man two doors down to register for volunteer training and rehearsals.

Two sets of such people are already getting their names on the dotted line. First are the volunteer "air spotters" the army is calling. Second, the amateur radio operators.

The army wants 600,000 volunteer "air spotters" signed up by September 1. These spotters will be trained to identify military planes and to phone warnings to air fields.

Two practice sessions have been held. One in New England, one around New York city. This is how the rehearsals work. Suppose a minute-man farmer on Martha's Vineyard sees "enemy" craft. He runs to the nearest phone, shouts "army flash" to the operator. She puts his call through to Mitchell Field, Long Island, so he can say, "Martha's Vineyard, six enemy two-engine bombers flying south. Overhead at 9:52 a. m. altitude about 10,000 feet."

In a region prepared for a rehearsal there will be many spotters. The cells will pile into the regional air command, Mitchell Field. Each call will help the air command plot the flight on a map that will tell the officers where to send interceptor planes.

The army says volunteers can write to Brig. Gen. J. C. McDonnell, Mitchell Field, Long Island; Brig. Gen. C. F. Wash, Fort George Wright, Washington; Brig. Gen. W. H. Frank, Tampa, Florida; or to Brig. Gen. M. F. Harbo, Riverside, California.

A pamphlet now being prepared will be sent to the volunteers. It will include silhouette pictures of military planes, and instructions for phoning in reports.

Jobs for Radio Hams
Next come the amateur radio operators. There are 53,000 of them. They could be invaluable in a section where telephone lines are down.

The amateurs have been ordered to stop all communication outside the country. They have also been asked to "police" the air, to spot suspicious, unidentified stations. They have found several renegades already, FCC reports.

Next come "blackout" practices for American cities. Seattle has already tried a total blackout. Plans are being formed by other city governments for such rehearsals, among them Washington, D. C., New York, Philadelphia and Newark. Inquiries from other cities point to dozens of other such practice sessions this summer.

New York, in addition, is perfecting a plan for evacuating the city.

Wanted: 500,000 Firemen
Now for the fire fighters. This country has 65,000 fire fighters on payrolls, and 750,000 volunteer fighters. The defense program wants another 500,000 volunteers for training courses that will deal with the various kinds of bombs and fires generally.

Fire chiefs will be asked through state defense councils to make minute surveys of their cities for types of buildings and construction equipment, personnel, communications, water supply. They will be asked to organize fire drills in schools, hospitals, public buildings and industrial plants. It is hoped that private plants will organize their own fire brigade.

One of the men who has worked on the fire-fighting plan pointed out that England had to augment its fire-fighting forces to 10 times the normal personnel. The fire fighting committee working with the defense program says it will be satisfied if 2,000,000 can be trained this year.

Doctors and nurses will have their own training program. Their immediate concern is sanitation in the crowded defense areas and around army camps. But they will also be given the latest information on the provisions England has made to care for air raid victims.

Pamphlets are being prepared to educate every household in the new protection techniques. One special booklet is being written about air raid shelters.

State and city defense councils will be centers of the educational program in their own communities. They will ask volunteer help of many organized groups such as the American Legion and the various professional groups whose aid would be needed—should war come.

To meet increasing demand for Mexican white fibre cotton the cultivation of cotton is being undertaken on a large scale with federal aid by many rice planters in the Yaqui Valley of Sonora, Mexico.

Crown for Queen Now on Display

Wall Street Store Shows Headpiece as Exhibit

On display in the show window of the Safford & Scudder jewelry store on Wall street is the crown which will be used to crown the young woman from the Hudson Valley who will be so fortunate as to be selected as the Hudson Valley Apple Blossom Queen on May 10.

The committee has elected to present to the 1941 queen the crown used in the ceremony and thus a new crown will be procured each season. In past years the original crown which was first placed upon the head of Queen Jane Ball was used. The future emblem of office which will be presented each year to the new queen by the ruling monarch of the previous season will be a jewel-studded scepter.

Arrangements are being made to have the scepter presented to the 1941 Apple Blossom Queen by Miss Allardice, who was 1940 Hudson Valley Queen. If arrangements can be made for her appearance here, Should Miss Allardice be unable to attend the festival, the first Apple Blossom Queen, Miss Jane Ball, may be called upon to perform this honor.

WHAT IT MEANS The Revolt in Iraq

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
Washington—The shock of the month for diplomatic Washington is not the battle of the Balkans, nor the blitz in Africa, but revolt in Iraq.

The sudden seizure of power by the Iraqi army's intriguing Rashid Ali al Ghalibani and his pro-Nazi clique means the British rear in the Middle East is threatened, as well as the back doors to Turkey and Russia.

But that's only part of the story.

Primarily the Iraq coup reflects the realism of all Moslems, and therein lies a barrel of trouble for Britain.

That little cut-out country down under Turkey is quite a bit more than a strategic chunk of territory. Primarily, Iraq is Turkey's backdoor supply line to the outside world. The Turkish end of the Berlin-to-Baghdad railroad terminates at the Iraq port of Basra. Likewise the Mosul oil fields are in Iraq, and the pipelines run through the territory of belligerent Iraqi tribes to British fleet supply ports in Palestine. So do the cross-desert bus lines.

Iraq was scissored out of the pre-World War Turkish empire by the League of Nations, mandated to the British. Through a series of treaties and oil concessions, the Iraqi won their status as a nation along about the end of the 20's signed an alliance, giving the British the right to move troops, establish air bases. The Royal Air Force also has tank corps for desert work against rebel tribesmen in Iraq.

Undercover reports to Washington say the Germans offered Iraq to Turkey as a prize if the Turks would turn against Britain at the beginning of the war. This the Turks refused on the ground that the Germans were offering something they did not possess.

Likewise, the British are said to have made assurances to Turkey about Iraq after the war, meaning that Turkey might again win back her possessions.

Of these secret dealings the Iraqi are well aware. So it happened that when the pro-Nazi Ghalibani seized power in Iraq, he was careful not to translate his German sympathies into public action against the British. Instead, he announced there'd be no change in relations.

That is interpreted here as mere Ghalibani insurance. The British called his hand on the

There are some advantages in the British position. They do have strategic bases in Iraq, and they do have an air force in the desert to nip revolt in the bud.

It is believed here generally, that the masses of Iraq's 3,000,000. Arabs sympathize with England, even though they rail at the Jews in Palestine, offer asylum to anti-Jewish agitators. They are disturbed by Hitler's repeated statements that the Germans are a superior race. If he could hate the Jews so much, could he not also one day regard the Arabs as a subject nation, exploitable ruthlessly for German ends?

But Moslems are also realists, and they know British defeat means either German supremacy or a period of confusion, in which Moslems generally might reap rich booty from western civilization.

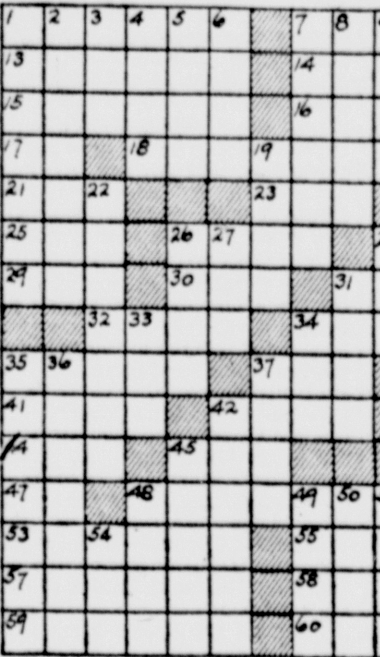

And so, Iraq, becomes the bell wether of the Moslem world, the testing ground, where Moslems learn how far they may flout British power in the Middle East. The first trick in that game goes to the British. They've moved in troops unchanged.

But that's only the beginning of the play.

Cards of Hostess's Married Daughters, Enclosed With Invitations, Suggested for Reception for Three Brides

From the numerous letters sent me I know that it is customary in many places for three or possibly four hostesses together to give one party. Under ordinary circumstances, a list of seven heading the invitations to an afternoon tea would be possible only if this were a public function. But since the situation of a particular reader is not ordinary, I do not want to be discouraging in my answer to this question.

"Please give me an idea of how I can work the invitation to a very big afternoon tea for three future brides and at the same time include the names of my three married daughters on the invitation. The reason I must include my daughters' names is that many of the friends of one or the other are to be included in the list of guests. And yet I do think a list of seven different names too much of a painful. Also will you tell me what my six guests of honor are expected to do. It makes an exaggerated long line in a big but not painful house."

The best answer to this, it seems to me, is to have third person invitations engraved this way:

Mrs. Henry Jones
Saturday, the 3rd of May from 4 to 7 o'clock

to meet
Miss Mary Smith
Miss Alice Mages
Miss Jane Doe

And then to each guest who is invited as a particular friend of one of your daughters, enclose this daughter's card in the invitation. At the party, you and the three brides-to-be receive the guests, and your daughters look after them as supplementary hostesses; introducing any who may be strangers, leading timid ones to the tea table; fetching tea and cakes for elderly ones. In short, they do whatever may be necessary to make the party pleasant.

A Woman's Suit Coat

Dear Mrs. Post: Please tell me whether it is proper for a woman to remove her suit coat when dining or dancing in a hotel dining room. A friend puts doing this in the same category with a man's removing his coat in public.

Answer: It is not the same at all—unless she is wearing a dicky instead of a blouse made to be seen without a coat! A man's waistcoat is a dicky! If a woman's blouse is pretty, she of course takes her coat off. If it is ugly or unbecoming, she may keep her coat on if she chooses, but it will suggest this truth—or else that she is leaving at once.

Reunion Ends 47-Year Separation

Reunited after a separation of 47 years are these sisters and their brother, Mrs. Nellie Steinman of New York city, Mrs. Florence Hurd of Union, and Mrs. Ella Hornbeck and Fred Ellsworth of this city.

Family Reunites After Being Apart 47-Year Period

After 47 years of separation, four brothers and sisters of a family of six have been reunited due to the careful and diligent searchings of the people involved.

It all began 17 years ago when Mrs. Laura Joy Ellsworth of this city died of double pneumonia and left her husband and six small children. The family was broken up; the husband returned to his former home to live with his mother, and with him took the second youngest child, Nellie, now Mrs. Steinman of New York city. The baby, Florence, was adopted into the home of friends of relatives of the family, who lived in Pennsylvania. The other children were taken by other relatives to be brought up as their children.

During the years the children who were living in and around Kingston were able to keep in touch with each other. For a time the family who had adopted the baby kept in touch with the other relatives but as they moved their place of residence frequently they soon were lost track of.

Florence had been duly adopted by the friends of the relatives and was to have been told of her foster parents when she reached the age of 21. Then she was to have returned to her brothers and sisters. When the brothers and sisters who were living in Kingston did not hear from their baby sister when the 21st year came and passed, they concluded that she was dead.

Florence, meanwhile, knew she had been adopted but thought that her foster mother was an aunt. She knew nothing of her blood brothers and sisters who were in scattered homes in Kingston.

The little family grew up, married and some died. Florence Ellsworth Gleason became Mrs. Florence Hurd. Ten years ago her foster father died and 14 months ago she lost her foster mother. While settling up the estate and going through old trunks in the attic she came upon her adoption papers. The papers told where she had been born, the names of the other members of the family and the circumstances of the adoption.

Through the chamber of commerce in Union City in western New York where she was then residing, she was furnished with the names of Ellsworths in Kingston. She wrote to them all and finally received a letter from Mrs. William Hornbeck of 32 Jansen avenue, who had been Miss Ella Ellsworth, the third youngest child. Mrs. Hornbeck gathered together all the old family portraits she could collect, took the family Bible and the family records and made the trip to Union City. When the two sisters saw each other they knew there could be no doubt as to their relationship. The family likeness was markedly noticeable.

Mrs. Hurd visited Mrs. Hornbeck over the week-end and there a reunion of the family was enjoyed after 47 years of separation. Mrs. Hurd was accompanied to Kingston by her youngest daughter, who is 16 years of age and the resemblance between the cousins is marked.

Defense Program Is Imperilled by Soft Coal Strike

Senate Committee Is Told By Edward F. McGrady Continuation Would Be Catastrophic

(By The Associated Press)

A continuation of the stoppage of soft coal mining would put the entire national defense effort in grave jeopardy, a Senate defense investigating committee was told today by Edward F. McGrady, special war department labor consultant.

McGrady testified that the 27-day shutdown of coal mines due to a wage dispute had sharply reduced the output of steel, ammonia and other vital products.

"I give you the facts," McGrady said. He added they were "giving the war department serious concern because they forebode a catastrophic effect upon the industrial mobilization effort." He said immediate settlement of the coal dispute could not avert damage to the defense program but could limit the degree of curtailment.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt asked William H. Davis, vice chairman of the defense mediation board, to report to him after testifying before the Senate group.

The Senate committee investigation had been deferred while the mediation board attempted to end the coal deadlock.

The board's attempt to bring the disputants together ran aground yesterday on the main issue: Shall the southern operators sign a contract with the union which eliminates a 40 cents a day differential in their favor as compared with the northern pay rate?

Northern operators already had agreed to a contract raising wages in their mines from $6 to $7 a day. President Roosevelt had proposed last week that all mines reopen and that the southerners agree to make any wage settlement retroactive to the date of work resumption.

Announcing failure to persuade the southerners to accept the proposal, William H. Davis of the mediation board said last night: "There are no further steps for the mediation board to take."

Other labor developments: Representatives of the Fairchild Aviation Corporation and C.I.O.'s Local 121 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers averted a strike at the firm's New York plant by agreeing on terms of a new contract.

A contract with the union, which has 400 members working in the plant, expired Saturday night. The members had voted last Tuesday to strike if it were not renewed. They wanted wage increases, paid vacation and holidays and a closed shop. Terms of the agreement were not announced pending a vote by rank and file unionists whether to accept it.

At Buffalo, N. Y., C.I.O. and A.F.L. leaders accepted a defense mediation board formula for ending a two week work stoppage at an American Car and Foundry plant which hampered seriously production of shells for Great Britain and the United States.

C.I.O.'s steel workers organizing committee sponsored the stoppage in an attempt to obtain a collective bargaining election to determine whether it or A.F.L.'s Federal Steel Local 22518 represented most of the plant's 1,500 employees. The formula provided that employees go back to work while the National Labor Relations Board investigated the representation question.

Financial and Commercial

Stocks Show Small Gains on Saturday After Lazy Week

After making new low ground for the year or longer, in the early part of last week, stocks a little better than held their own for the balance and closed Saturday with small irregular gains for the week as a whole. The short session Saturday was a small affair, but 136,050 shares, with minor changes, while dealings for the entire week totaled less than two and a half million shares. Compared with the close on the previous Saturday the Dow-Jones industrials had a net gain for the week of .28 point, to close at 116.43; the rail average was ahead .70 for the week to 28.42 and the utilities were off .05, to 18.12.

Action of the market last week indicated that the increasing seriousness of the situation abroad, which was marked by the beginning of a decline in prices on April 6 as the invasion of Yugoslavia got under way, apparently has been pretty well discounted by now. Currently the center of disturbance, tending to give halt to those who would invest in securities, is located in Washington. Prominent among factors advising caution are the reaction to the outcome of the Balkan campaign and intensifying of the program for "all out" aid to Britain, suggested plans for raising additional revenue of three and a half billions which, as they now stand, are even more severe than had been expected by financial people, and the labor situation, with particular reference to the strike in the soft coal regions. The latter already has resulted in the closing down of about 20 blast furnaces, due to shortage of coke, which means loss of a daily production of about 15,000 tons of pig iron.

A drop in production has characterized the steel industry as the strike continued and there may be further cuts this week. Vice President Binkley of Pittsburgh Steel predicts that "the entire steel industry will be down flat by May 10 unless this situation is relieved at once."

Commodities generally trended upward latter part of the week, the futures index after showing declines for six days, making moderate gains the last three days of the week.

Russia's postal department handled 7,000,000,000 newspapers and magazines in the last year.

New York, April 28 (AP)—The stock market today kept its feet on the ground most of the time despite the preponderance of bearish news items.

Prices edged upward in early dealings but many issues eventually slipped. Weakness was a rarity in any department, however, and modest advances were well distributed near the final hour. Activity was slack throughout, transfers being at the rate of approximately 300,000 shares.

Bonds steadied and commodities were a shade uneven.

Stocks up a trifle at intervals included U. S. Steel, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, General Motors, Goodrich, Sperry, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse and Anaconda.

Backward were Allied Chemical, Woolworth, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck and American Can.

Among better performers in the curb were Humble Oil, G. A. Fuller and Bell Telephone of Canada.

Trucks Sideswipe on By-Pass, Snarl Traffic

Two truck drivers had a narrow escape from injury when the sideswipe they were driving, sideswiped each other on East Chester street, near Tammany street. The force of the impact was such that the cabs on both trucks were demolished and one of the trucks was turned over on its side, blocking traffic for several hours. The truck (shown above) that was upset was owned by the Capital Metal Company of Albany and driven by Robert McCullough of 303 First street, Albany. It was loaded with junk and was proceeding south toward Broadway, while the other truck owned by Roy Faci of Scotia and operated by Paul Faci of 2160 Van Vranken avenue, Schenectady, was proceeding north toward the city line. The Faci truck was loaded with vegetables. The police department received a report of the wreck about 5 o'clock this morning and police officers were rushed to the scene to take charge of the traffic. Until the upset truck was removed only one-way traffic was possible.

Woman Is Injured By Falling Board

Mrs. Margaret LeWare Is Victim of Accident

Mrs. Margaret LeWare of Hurley was taken to the Benedictine Hospital about 9:30 o'clock this morning for treatment of injuries received when she was struck by a piece of lumber which fell from a passing truck.

Mrs. LeWare was walking along the road by the Markle garage on Route 208 in Hurley, shortly before 9 o'clock, when the accident happened. The piece of hard maple, which struck her in the chest, afterward was found along the highway. It was about four feet long and about 3 x 6 inches on the end.

At the Benedictine Hospital, to which Mrs. LeWare was taken by the Conner ambulance, her condition this noon was reported as good.

Sheriff Molyneux began an immediate investigation of the affair and Deputies Vredenburg and Winnet set out to locate the truck, which is said to have been loaded with used lumber and which continued on its way south following the accident.

Bill Would Boost Fire Department Payroll in City

Kingston's paid fire fighting force must be increased by an additional six men on January 1, 1942, increasing the fire department payroll by $12,240 a year, which would mean an increase in the city's tax rate of about 50 cents per thousand valuation, if Governor Herbert Lehman signs a bill filed with him on April 10.

The bill, which was introduced in the state legislature by Senator Hampton, requires those cities which do not have a two-platoon system to establish such a system, and those cities which now have the two-platoon system must reduce the hours of labor of paid firemen one day a week.

In order to give fire protection to Kingston on the present scale, with the same number of men as are now on duty, six additional firemen will be necessary. At present the fire fighting force of the city consists of 30 paid men who now work an 84-hour week, and if the governor signs the bill now before him the working hours will be reduced to 72 hours a week.

The legislative committee of the Mayors' Conference of the state had unanimously disapproved this measure for the following reasons: "The mandatory provision in this bill would greatly increase the cost of fire fighting in every city in the state. It would shorten the hours of labor of every city fireman and consequently would compel each city administration either to increase the number of firemen or subject owners of improved real property to pay higher fire insurance rates if the number of firemen were not increased. In either event the owner of real property would have to pay the cost."

The Mayor's Conference, said Mayor C. J. Heiselman, president, when seen today, has never opposed a two-platoon system. It has always believed that when practicable and the financial condition and tax limitations would permit, a city should establish a two-platoon system.

This bill, he said, requires every city having a population less than 1,000,000 to establish a two-platoon system. Many of these cities have done this but there are a few small cities which have not for one of two reasons: Either their financial conditions or tax limitations would not permit them to pay the extra cost which would be heavy, or their fire fighting force is so organized that a two-platoon system would be impracticable or not desired by the firemen.

The Mayor's Conference, said Mayor Heiselman, also raised the question of the constitutionality of the bill because it does not apply alike in terms and effect to all cities (New York city being excepted by Section 2) and as requests were not filed with the legislature by the cities affected, asking for the law, as required by the Constitution.

The provisions of the bill require the re-arranging of the hours of labor, giving the firemen practically 12 hours more off duty each week.

About the Folks

Austin Carey sat in the chancel during the Mass. Many beautiful floral pieces and numerous Mass cards were placed near the casket. Burial
